TNW2020 Online Edition - October 1&2

The 15th edition of our flagship event calls upon 25,000 of the world's brightest minds to explore the role technology plays in our collective future. With the added expertise of Financial Times, TNW2020 will bring a global speaker lineup and an immersive digital experience to attendees' living rooms.

Due to global travel restrictions and social-distancing measures, this year's tech festival will be hosted as a two-day online event on October 1 & 2.

While the format is changing, TNW promises the same production value and unmatched energy that it has become popular for. At the heart of TNW2020 is the line-up of diverse world-class speakers – new media leaders, bestselling authors, futurists, entrepreneurs and tech leaders.

Some of the 125 speakers announced so far:

Lara Sweet, Chief People Officer, Snap

Rebecca Roth, Social Media Specialist, NASA

Tony Jebara, VP Engineering, Spotify

Nick Clegg, VP Global Affairs and Communications, Facebook

Purna Virji, Senior Manager of Global Engagement, Microsoft

Shimona Mehta, Head of EMEA, Shopify
Joshua To, Design Director, Google
Tamar Yehoshua, Chief Product Officer, Slack
Sarah Friar, CEO, Nextdoor

TNW2020 content will be spread across 12 different tracks: from AI to design, ecommerce, sustainability, branding, and transport, there is sure to be a track for everyone. The global speaker lineup and high quality content will be combined with an immersive digital networking experience, virtual expo booths, demo presentations and workshops throughout both days.

A range of TNW2020 tickets are now available to suit any type of attendee, whether they are tuning in to enjoy the speakers, book business meetings, or network with executives. Early bird registration ensures best rates: free Knowledge passes and discounted Business passes are now available.
