

WeTransfer and Mozilla partner to integrate file-sharing app into Firefox

WeTransfer / Mozilla integration makes it easy to share big files straight from Mozilla products, and symbolizes the companies' shared values

WeTransfer today announces its third party integration with Mozilla. WeTransfer's collaboration with Mozilla allows users to effortlessly share large files in and out of most of Mozilla products, like the Firefox web browser and Thunderbird email client.

Mozilla (stylized as moz://a) is an open source software community founded in 1998. The community uses, develops, spreads and supports Mozilla products, thereby promoting exclusively free software and open standards.

Travis Brown, WeTransfer VP of Business Development, commented: “We’re thrilled to debut this collaboration with Mozilla. They set a standard in corporate responsibility and in the move towards a better and more healthy internet. We admire and respect them for it, and we’re proud to hold true to the same values at WeTransfer.”

WeTransfer's founding principle is to make the sharing and transfer of ideas easier and simpler. This partnership is an extension of that, and will integrate the company's simplicity and file sharing capabilities for millions of Mozilla-product users while continuing to protect users privacy, a value inherent to both companies. Mozilla and WeTransfer work tirelessly to make sure the internet and digitization is accessible for all, and at the same time work easier, simpler, and more efficient. With the WeTransfer integration with Mozilla, it will be easier than ever to share ideas within and outside of workplaces.

The WeTransfer / Mozilla Firefox app is now available in beta.

ABOUT WETRANSFER

WeTransfer is the simplest way to send your files around the world. The service was founded in 2009 in Amsterdam by Bas Beerens and Nalden, who wanted to create an easy platform for people to send big files without any sign-up. Today, over 40 million active users transfer one billion files every month all over the world. It is WeTransfer's mission to enable the effortless transfer of ideas between creative minds. We want to help our users get in, and stay in, their creative flow – that strange and beautiful state where everything comes together and great things happen.

WeTransfer has a dual revenue model, split between advertising and premium subscriptions. With WeTransfer Plus, customers benefit from bigger transfer sizes, storage and personalization options. WeTransfer also works with the world's biggest brands, including Google, Samsung, Netflix and Squarespace, to develop and deliver beautiful, full-screen advertisements on our background wallpapers.

Since day one, WeTransfer has proudly supported the creative communities by giving away up to 30% of the advertising space to showcase projects we love. Creative partnerships have been launched with some of the world's most interesting individuals and organizations, including Björk, Trevor Noah, Ryan McGinley, Moby, FKA twigs, alt-J, McSweeney's, World Press Photo, The Royal Academy of Arts, WWF and the Ace Hotel Group. On our content platform WePresent, we tell unexpected stories about creative minds from around the world. WeTransfer also supports tomorrow's creative leaders by offering free premium accounts to all arts students in the United States.

Following a $25 million investment from Highland Capital in 2015, WeTransfer opened a US office in Venice Beach, Los Angeles, to add to the Amsterdam headquarters.
