Tarah Who? Releases New Single And Video, "Supposedly A Man"

(Los Angeles, CA) September 17th, 2021 – Tarah Who?'s latest single and video, "Supposedly A Man," is available on major digital platforms. Tarah Who? is known for their bold lyrics and exuberance. Born in France, Tarah began playing the drums at age 14, ignoring those around her, suggesting she play more ladylike music. She created her own path with a steadfast will, including bass, guitar, singing, songwriting, and producing in her music endeavors.

Influenced by the #MeToo movement, "Supposedly A Man" is a track and video that sheds awareness on the atrocities committed against women and everyday gender inequalities. Tarah believes there is a low bar for men's behavior, creating a society where violence and verbal abuse against women are the status quo.

Explosive while balancing integrity with exceptional song-craft, "Supposedly A Man" channels grunge-punk and emotional anthems to serve a higher purpose. Tarah states, "I am really sensitive to things that happen around me, and I love studying psychology and human behavior." Infusing the 1990's alternative rock and grunge tradition of balancing integrity with music, Tarah Who?'s latest track is hard to ignore and a catalyst for exposing gender inequality.
