About hupstream

hupstream was founded in May 2011 with the goal of helping companies automate their projects using Linux and Open Source solutions: custom Linux systems, Linux build tools and systems, upstream feedback loops, and kernel expertise.

The mission of the three founders of hupstream is to build a diverse team, rich in experience that compliment a singular idea: observe, understand, and simplify the daily lives of customers, whether in a home environment or in a business environment, with efficient and powerful tools, custom-built in collaboration with the customer using Open Source components.

Open Source signals innovation, flexibility, stability, longevity, and high-value at a low cost. Any beneficial and effective collaboration requires confidence, expertise, and mutual respect. It's with this perspective that hupstream has partnered with more than thirty businesses in many diverse sectors as varied as aeronautics, bancassurance, software development, and professional training, with services specific to each company's particular situation and taking into account its specific needs, objectives, and constraints.

hupstream is also a founder of Kernel Recipes and recently launched the Meetup group "Open Recipes."
