

Voice & Exit Conference Gathers Innovators to Share Challenging Ideas

The 'Festival of the Future' lands in Austin June 20-21, 2015

“Voice & Exit is everything that SXSW used to be.”

— Sam Elick, CEO of BrainJuice

Austin, TX — Voice & Exit’s 3rd annual hybrid conference, dubbed the ‘Festival of the Future’ by attendees, returns to Austin next month with a diverse speaker line-up who all share one common trait: a dedication to maximizing human flourishing through entrepreneurship and innovation.

Ryan Holiday, marketer and bestselling author, has helped millions be successful in their own way, either by showing them another path, or by showing them how to turn personal trials into triumphs.

John Mackey, founder and CEO of Whole Foods, leads one of the largest food retailers in the world and still puts his deeper purpose first, proving businesses thrive on an ethos.

Jamie Wheal, Executive Director of the Flow Genome Project, is an expert in bringing out the best in people, from high-performance “flow-hacking” to ultimate experience.

Dylan Evans, AI researcher and author, was bold enough to try his own Utopia Experiment, and humble enough to admit that our modern inter-dependencies have a value all their own.

Jack Kruse, controversial neurosurgeon, is determined to unlock clues to optimal health, longevity and increased performance—whatever the critics say about him.

Jeffrey Tucker, entrepreneur and author, is Bitcoin’s most outspoken evangelist and a master at delivering optimism of technological liberation.

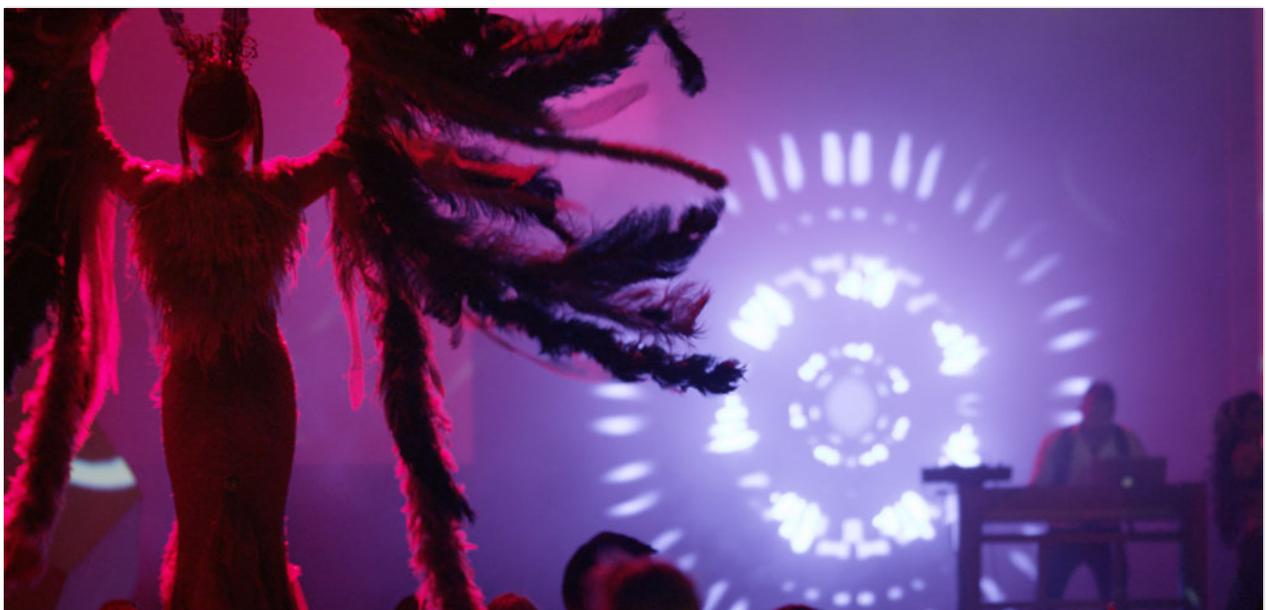

Mark Willis, CEO of Keller Williams, helped one of the world’s largest realty companies get on top by empowering its employees.

Magatte Wade, CEO of Tiossan, has a no-nonsense approach to global development that involves empowering the poorest peoples of the world with startups.

These Seeds talks at Voice & Exit are short, engaging sessions to kick-off the experience and are designed to get ideas flowing. Attendees are then invited to participate in interactive Sprouts workshops to expound upon the concepts introduced. These include workshops by Brian Robertson on “Holacracy,” biohacking, and a debate on the future of higher education.

“TED is interesting. Voice & Exit is life changing.”

— Justin Arman, CEO of My Magic Mud

Saturday culminates in a techno-arts party called Blooms with live musical performances from David Starfire and CAPYAC.

Sunday brings Harvest—a chance for attendees to integrate inspiration through workshops and meditative exercises. As one 2014 attendee put it, “Voice & Exit was like a beautiful rewiring of my brain. It left me with a burning desire to make my mark, to connect, and to create change so that we can all flourish.”

Another 2014 attendee said that he “measured an incredible financial ROI from the relationships [gained]” and called it “more than ‘networking.’” For entrepreneurs and anyone else interested in attaining the highest ROI, Voice & Exit has added a new ‘Mastermind’ pass for Friday evening that includes a hosted dinner and exclusive workshop with Jamie Wheal on hacking “flow” to increase productivity and enhance creativity.

For more info visit www.voiceandexit.com.

To obtain a press pass, please contact Meg Gilliland or Tiffany Madison.

SPOKESPERSON

Max Borders

Co-founder

max@voiceandexit.com

 maxborders

Seth Blaustein

Co-founder

seth@voiceandexit.com

 SethBlueFilm

Meg Gilliland

Social Media / Public Relations

meg@creativestructors.com

 meggilliland

Tiffany Madison

Public Relations

tiffany@creativedestructors.com

 tiffanymadison

Criticize by Creating

Why we started Voice & Exit
