

Renaissance Marquis Recognizes Two Caregivers on National Nurses Week

ROME, Ga. (June 14, 2018) – The two-member nursing team at Renaissance Marquis was recognized on National Nurses Week, May 6 to 12, with the gifts of a new Littmann® Stethoscope, a personal note and a bouquet of flowers at each one’s nursing station in appreciation of their dedicated service.

National Nurses Week, an initiative of the American Nurses Association, recognizes the significant contributions of nurses to the health and well-being of others. The week concludes with a special day in remembrance of Florence Nightingale, the founder of modern nursing.

“Our nurses are the backbone of our care for our residents. We want our nurses to know how much the Renaissance Marquis team, residents and family members appreciate all of their dedicated work to serving the greatest generation with excellence,” executive director of Renaissance Marquis, Renita Carnes, said.

The nurses recognized were: Catie Mason, LPN, of Rome, Georgia, and Shelly Collins, LPN of Armuchee, Georgia.

“We could not provide the highest standard of care without our team of nurses. We wanted to express our gratitude for each of our nurses in a memorable way. They deserve to be celebrated, and we are glad that we are able to take the time to celebrate them,” said Melissa Boatwright, director of clinical support of Legacy Senior Living.
