

Netflix & Chow: The Ultimate Food & TV Pairings for All your Easter Needs

It's Easter, and that means one thing: time to catch up on that backlog of unwatched shows on netflix.

Yeah, we know the long weekend is also a time to catch up with your beloved family, but let's get serious here. It's been a good few months since your last holiday, and you deserve a good binge.

This leaves one burning question: what are you going to eat while you watch House of Cards? Better Call Saul? Whatever else you will while your day away with? As we always say, the best way to truly understand someone is to eat like them — so eat like your favourite characters today.

House of Cards: HoC is all the hype right now (I hear the new season was really good) and you should probably enjoy it in full Underwood style with a sizzling rack of ribs glazed with peppery BBQ sauce.

Master of None. I don't want to spoil anything, but I'll just say that Dev, Aziz Anzari's protagonist in MoN, makes an incredible carbonara. Fight off the jealousy by ordering your own fresh-made pasta topped with aged parmesan and the sauce of your choice.

Narcos. If you can't find arepas, a Colombian specialty native to Pablo Escobar's hometown Medellin, you've an excuse to indulge in lime-marinated salmon ceviche, enchiladas doused in flavourful verde salsa, or even a humble burrito stuffed with slow-cooked carnitas or carne asada — all delicious foods Pablo probably loved.

Love. The hipsters of Judd Apatow's "Love" love some really hip food, so we'd recommend finding something as wacky and original as a ramen burger (literally a burger sandwiched between two firm buns MADE OF RAMEN) or as fresh and regenerative as a kale-avocado salad sprinkled with plump pomegranate seeds. Either way, you'll be ready to rock a flannel and join the cast in no time.

Better Call Saul. The cuisine in Albuquerque, New Mexico, where Saul's alter-ego Jimmy works, is a combination of classic American and Tex-Mex. That means it's up to you whether you'd prefer a juicy bacon cheeseburger with crunchy steak fries, a platter of crispy tacos packed to overflowing with pollo asada, or even Heuvos Rancheros served in a warm corn tortilla and topped with black beans and salsa. It's all fair game for Jimmy — and you.

You're welcome.
