

Council For Human Development Swiss Association

Mission

To provide humanity with the fluid intelligence through Neuroplastic Mental Acceleration (NMA) to survive the fourth industrial revolution and the rise of AI.

Background

With over fifteen years proprietary research and development into the links between human psychological, neurological, behavioural and social development, we are world leaders in the area of NMA, providing solutions to companies on developing innovation and agility within the workforce, as well as a structure to provide work to those who will inevitably be made redundant, within the expanding industry of human brain development — into flow state and hemispheric synchronisation, with high levels of critical thought and super creativity.

Neuroplasticity has a history that extends back two hundred years, yet for the most part was rejected by the scientific community until the sixties, despite research to the contrary. Whilst mostly only known in the neuroscience world, as a methodology to address neurological difficulties, it is only now coming to the fore for mental acceleration purposes, especially within the context of upgrading our cognitive capabilities for an effective and exponentially developing relationship with AI.

Our systems disrupt the current educational, employment and training worlds, as we work with brain structure first and foremost, to avoid stress and burnout, and consequently gain productivity and solutions-based thought, through greater bandwidth and frequency of thought in gamma and theta brainwaves, as well as hemispheric synchronisation and flow state. In effect, we can take an average brain and develop it into a JK Rowling, a Tony Robbins, or an Einstein for that matter, by leveraging the unconscious mind and latent potential that can be released through developing fluid intelligence through concentrating on neuroplasticity in the in-formation state, rather than just trying to learn information in a state of overload.

Organisational Structure.

As an architecture, we are divided into five independent areas within our ecosystem. The first two are functional, and the other three are yet to launch. Council, MindGym.club app, Human Blockchain, Consciousness Coin & University.

Council For Human Development

Not for profit Swiss Association, self funded, working in the research & development and consultancy fields of human development for the benefit of humanity.

The MindGYM App.

Launched with Google and Apple in April 2023 and yet to be openly marketed, it is a porthole into the world of NMA. Billed literally as — The World's Most Powerful App — in terms of content and potential for personal, social, and commercial change. Currently under the Council umbrella, it can be sectioned as a stand alone investment opportunity, providing an investor with the opportunity to gain a return from the monthly user fees of either £5.95 Basic, £30 Classic or £100 Premium. The market for the app is both business and consumer, providing advanced highly engaging and effective brain training through NMA. The app is designed to have considerably more effective content than any other subscription model in the personal development field, at a far lower price, in order to access a global market and feed the university with new potential. The Mindvalley organisation might be a comparison, yet we aim to provide our proprietary content to organisations working in this space. The brain training market is around $6 billion in 2023, and has a projection of $44 billion by 2030.

The app is a marketing device for the following projects, and thus can have an exit strategy for the investor.

The Human Blockchain.

A fully autonomous decentralised training platform, providing secure investment for investors into human potential within a closed trainer training eco system. The platform will enable investors to securely sponsor individuals or groups through the training, and gain a high secure return from the ongoing training activity on the platform. The platform takes advantage of the high volumes of white collar workers who will inevitably be displaced by AI, and arguably provide the only industry of the future outside the Metaverse.

The Consciousness Coin

A token that provides investors/ sponsors of human potential on the Human Blockchain platform, a secure method of exchange underpinned by the industry of the future.

The Consciousness University

An educational and research centre focused on the development of humanity through scientific study into mental development through neuroplastic training.
