Just Eat Takeaway.com and Sodexo sign a global partnership, kicking off in Belgium

Just Eat Takeaway.com, a leading global online food delivery marketplace, and Sodexo, the world leader of quality of life services, have signed a global partnership which will kick-off this week in Belgium and will extend to other European countries in the coming period. Belgian consumers can now use their Sodexo meal Card as a payment method for ordering their meals at a wide variety of Belgian restaurants throughout the country seven days per week via the Takeaway.com website and app. More countries including France will follow in the course of the year.

The partnership between Sodexo and Just Eat Takeaway.com will help to facilitate consumers daily life and provide them with a simple, fast and secure payment experience. It combines the very best of Sodexo's expertise in digital transactions and Just Eat Takeaway.com's broad range of offerings on the platform. In Belgium, this new service represents a major opportunity for the over 1.300 restaurants that will be available from launch, and more will be added over time.

For Aurélien Sonet, Global CEO of Sodexo Benefits and Rewards Services: "This partnership continues to illustrate the acceleration of the digitalisation of Sodexo. Teleworking has had a huge impact on our eating habits and has transformed the way we have lunch. In this evolution, we want to offer our consumers easy and flexible options for their meals, while supporting local restaurants. It is a great step forward to addressing the new challenges of the workplace and employee experience at work and beyond."

"We are continuously developing new product features and innovations which are all about empowering your every food moment, including lunch. The collaboration with Sodexo connects more consumers worldwide with the wide choice of offering on our platforms. No matter if you work from the office, home or remotely, there is always a restaurant of choice nearby," explains Imad Qutob, Sr. Director Corporate Solutions at Just Eat Takeaway.com.
