Candlelight concerts arrive at the Stockholm City Hall this Christmas

Continuing their global expansion, Fever, the leading entertainment discovery platform, quickly becoming known as the “Netflix of experiences”, brings their Fever Original musical concept to the Swedish capital.

Having already delighted more than 2 million people in New York, London, Sydney, Paris, Madrid and more than 90 cities worldwide, Fever brings the magic of its "Candlelight" concerts to Stockholm.

The Candlelight concerts are a classical music production presenting iconic pieces at an accessible price and, at the same time, offering the community access to the cultural heritage of each city since these shows leave their usual context -concert halls- to immerse themselves in the most magical places of the cities through which they pass. This original Fever concept has succeeded in bringing classical music to a whole new audience, given that 70% of the guests are under the age of 40 years old.

“Fever and its “Fever Originals” aim to democratize and facilitate access to culture and entertainment. Candlelight was born with this goal in mind: a series of contemporary classical music concerts with emblematic pieces at an affordable price.”

— Fran Hein, Fever’s Cofounder

Candlelight concerts have been performed in unique venues worldwide, from churches to libraries to mansions and other historic landmarks that form part of each city's cultural heritage, creating a network of talented local musicians in each city.

The greatest hits of Vivaldi, Mozart, Beethoven or Chopin, will sound with the intimate light of countless candles illuminating the famous Stockholm City Hall starting this December. Located in the heart of the city, this Stockholm's major tourist attractions will be the perfect place to make the Candlelight Magic happen.
