2. ANANTARA PALAZZO NAIADI ROME HOTEL

Anantara's Italian debut, Anantara Palazzo Naiadi Rome Hotel is immersed in the splendour of ancient Rome thanks to its privileged position in the heart of Piazza della Repubblica and its fascinating architectural heritage, which includes original elements commissioned by Pope Clement XI for the Vatican in 1705. A proud member of The Leading Hotels of the World, the property overlooks the imposing Fountain of the Naiads, from which it takes its name, and rises above the ancient Baths of Diocletian, whose foundations, pools and mosaics can be admired from the lower level through striking glass floors.

Originally designed and built by architect Gaetano Koch between 1887 and 1898, the hotel was later reimagined by Maurizio Papiri, who transformed it into a luxury landmark in the early 2000s. In 2022, the TBC Interiorismo studio completed a full renovation on behalf of Anantara, breathing new life into the iconic Roman palace. The hotel's magnificent neoclassical portico creates a grand sense of arrival, setting the tone for the opulence within. Inside, a soaring two-storey lobby unfolds in white-on-white colonnades and stuccoes, crowned by an enormous Murano-glass chandelier. Contemporary artworks, including an imposing Sironi painting at the entrance, add a modern counterpoint to the historic grandeur.

Home to 232 rooms and suites, the hotel also features the fine-dining restaurant INEO, awarded 1 MICHELIN Star in the 2026 Guide, the first Anantara Spa in Italy, and one of central Rome's largest panoramic terraces, complete with a swimming pool and chic event space beside the lively SEEN by Olivier Restaurant & Bar.

The neighbourhood

Anantara Palazzo Naiadi Rome Hotel is located just a short distance from the Monti district, one of Rome's most genuinely historic and character-rich neighbourhoods. Monti is defined by its maze of charming streets animated by artisan workshops, creative studios and small vintage boutiques where everyday Roman life still unfolds much as it always has. Wandering through the district means immersing yourself in a vibrant, contemporary energy where tradition and modern urban culture blend effortlessly. It remains one of the city's most emblematic quarters and is often at the heart of Anantara experiences designed to reveal the most authentic, lived-in side of Rome.

The Baths of Diocletian

The hotel's building stands upon and follows the curve of the vast semicircular exedra of the ancient Baths of Diocletian. The grand urban space once known as Piazza Esedra is today Piazza della Repubblica, remodelled and renamed after the Unification of Italy and redesigned with the sweeping porticoes that still line Via Nazionale, the boulevard leading directly to Piazza Venezia and the historic heart of Rome.

The Baths of Diocletian were among the largest thermal complexes in the ancient city, spanning 14 hectares and accommodating up to 3,000 people. Built between 298 and 306 AD under the emperors Diocletian and Maximian, the complex remained in operation for roughly 230 years. At its centre lay the main bathing sequence—frigidarium, tepidarium, calidarium and natatio—surrounded by gymnasiums and gardens filled with trees, plants, pathways and statues.

Behind this core structure rose the great exedra, with gardens, fountains and seating, likely used for theatrical performances, as well as two rectangular halls that served as libraries. Aligned with the calidarium were two octagonal rooms, one of which today hosts an exhibition of sculptures. Water was supplied by a branch of the Acqua Marcia, ancient Rome's third aqueduct, built in 144 BC and stretching approximately 91 kilometres.

The Baths of Diocletian remained in use well after the fall of the Western Roman Empire, only falling into disuse around 537 AD when the Ostrogoths cut the aqueducts supplying water to Rome.

The new Rome

In 1885, as part of a competition to redefine the appearance of the “new Rome,” architect Gaetano Koch won the commission to transform the area that is now known as Piazza della Repubblica. His majestic, Renaissance-inspired project, completed in 1892, created one of the city's most elegant squares. Koch, who also designed the original structure of the hotel, envisioned the curving façade as an architectural embrace, echoing the ancient exedra and framing the entrance to Via Nazionale.

Renaissance classicism is evident throughout his design: monumental arches supporting the main floor and two upper levels, façades clad in Roman travertine marble, and richly detailed stucco work adorning the portico vaults and attic. The result is a harmonious dialogue between ancient Rome and the newly unified capital — a legacy that continues to define the hotel's setting today.

The Clementino wing

The hotel's Clementino Wing takes its name from the Clementino Granary built in 1705 by the architect Fontana by order of Pope Clement XI to store the public grain. It is marked by a beautiful marble portal at number 33 Via delle Terme di Diocleziano, decorated with cornucopias, ribbons and, in the centre, a large star with eight points.

3. ROOMS AND SUITES

Striking the perfect balance between international luxury and Roman authenticity, Anantara Palazzo Naiadi's 232 rooms and suites are spread across two wings and four floors. Set in a prestigious location in the heart of Rome, they offer guests an ideal base from which to explore the city's many marvels. Interiors span contemporary to neoclassical styles, complemented by marble- and travertine-clad bathrooms enriched with Acqua di Parma amenities.

In the historic Clementino wing, rooms are distinguished by their individual character and style, featuring original beams and either a balcony with views of the piazza or a tranquil rooftop terrace overlooking the ancient Basilica of Santa Maria degli Angeli.

Spanning up to 186 square metres, the suites offer a choice of balconies facing either the archaeological remains of the Baths of Diocletian or the Fountain of the Naiads. Many also feature ensuite hydromassage tubs, TechnoGym kit bags, mezzanines or separate living rooms.

Suite guests enjoy exclusive privileges, including complimentary non-alcoholic drinks, an ironing service, tickets to Roman cultural attractions and access to the Anantara Spa wet area (subject to reservation). A butler service is available on request, and depending on the suite category, guests may also enjoy access to the Executive Lounge, where daily breakfast is served, as well as transfer services to and from the airport or train station.

Four-legged friends are warmly welcomed and can enjoy the same level of comfort and indulgence.

Sophia Loren Presidential Suite Image

The Sophia Loren Presidential Suite, inaugurated on 20 September 2024 on the occasion of the diva's 90th birthday — celebrated with her closest loved ones on the hotel's rooftop — was conceived as the actress's Roman home. Designed to faithfully narrate her life and passions to those wishing to discover her more deeply, the suite combines the pleasure of a stay with an immersive experience into the habits of this global cinema icon. Meticulously created in collaboration with the actress's son, Edoardo Ponti, the suite tells the story of Sophia Loren through its décor, accessories, images, and sense of taste: from her favourite flowers (white roses) to her most cherished reading, including books she personally authored, as well as her most famous films, makeup, music, photographs, flavours and recipes. The suite is a window into the actress's world, adaptable to individual desires, authentic and unfiltered — just like its protagonist, who for some time has chosen the rooms of Anantara Palazzo Naiadi as her preferred refuge in the Eternal City.

4. ANANTARA SPA AND THE FITNESS CENTRE

Built above the site of the Diocletian Baths - the monumental thermal complex that once formed the heart of ancient Rome's social life - Anantara Spa honours historic wellness traditions through both its facilities and its signature therapies. At the core of the 350-square-metre sanctuary lies an expansive wet area featuring a caldarium, tepidarium, frigidarium, emotional shower, Kneipp path, sauna, ice fountain, hammam, Vichy shower, infrared sauna and a relaxation lounge where herbal teas are served.

From here, guests retreat to one of four treatment suites - three singles and one for couples - each with a private infrared sauna, emotional shower and dedicated relaxation space. All hotel guests can also enjoy 30 minutes of complimentary access to the wet area.

Many of the signature treatments draw directly from Roman rituals, including the Diocletian Healing Ritual, inspired by the emperor's own wellness practices and using traditional ingredients such as olive oil, honey, sea salt, sage and lavender in modern formulations for their regenerating and rebalancing properties. The Sabine Luxury Facial pays homage to the origins of Rome, harnessing precious ingredients to counteract the signs of ageing, while the Gladiators Luxury Facial for men promotes cell regeneration with AHA and BHA fruit acids, a remineralising mask and deep hydration using medicinal plant hydrolats.

Guests can also explore advanced skincare technologies: the high-tech HydraFacial MD® uses hydro-dermal abrasion delivered through a delicate vacuum-effect pen to purify, brighten and tone the skin, while Intraceuticals Oxygen employs a hyperbaric oxygen system to infuse a low-molecular-weight hyaluronic acid serum enriched with vitamins, botanical extracts, antioxidants and peptides.

The spa also draws on Anantara's Eastern roots, offering Ayurvedic and Thai therapies, as well as face and body treatments that use natural remedies and modern products, including marine cosmetics from the renowned French brand Thalion and Italian HUR products made from 100% natural, vegan and cruelty-free ingredients. Asian-inspired rituals for hands and feet, along with a dedicated manicure and pedicure corner, add another layer of indulgence.

In the TechnoGym-equipped fitness centre, self-led cardio and weight-training sessions are complemented by the option of indoor and outdoor activities guided by expert personal trainers. During the warmer months, the rooftop swimming pool overlooking Rome's monuments invites guests to swim laps, unwind in the tranquillity of the solarium, or join open-air yoga and meditation sessions that blend movement, breath and natural light in a setting suspended above the city. The pool is reserved for hotel guests and day-pass visitors, who can also enjoy a 45-minute body or facial massage at Anantara Spa.

5. RESTAURANTS AND BARS

Executive Chef Heros De Agostinis Headshot

With nearly three decades immersed in the eras of nouvelle cuisine and molecular gastronomy, Roman native Heros De Agostinis brings to fine dining venue INEO, 1 MICHELIN Star, the techniques, discipline and inspiration shaped by working alongside some of the world's most iconic chefs.

Fresh out of hotel school, he began his career with Heinz Beck at the three-Michelin-starred La Pergola at Rome's Cavalieri Waldorf Astoria — an encounter that ignited his passion for fine dining. He later trained with Beck's own mentor, Heinz Winkler, a pioneer of French-style German haute cuisine. De Agostinis would eventually reunite with Beck at Apsleys in London, contributing to the restaurant's Michelin star, before moving to Monte Carlo to run the Mediterranean restaurant at the Hotel Metropole for two of the most influential chefs of their generation, Joël Robuchon and, once more, Heinz Beck.

Other formative chapters included London's Halkin Hotel, where he learned from Gualtiero Marchesi, the father of modern Italian cuisine, and a subsequent stint with Marc Veyrat in France that exposed him to the discipline and precision of classic French brigades.

After the pandemic, De Agostinis took on a major leadership role overseeing 12 restaurants at The Ritz-Carlton Bahrain, before returning to Italy to join Anantara. Initially tasked with creating a 360-degree culinary programme for the group, he subsequently focused his creative energy on the signature restaurant at Anantara Palazzo Naiadi, INEO.

INEO Image

INEO, named after the Latin word for "to enter, to begin", is an invitation to step into the world of Executive Chef Heros De Agostinis, whose vision has been shaped by the aromas, scents and spices of the places he has called home throughout his decades-long career. Rooted in his Roman heritage and enriched by his travels, the 28-seat INEO is a refined medley of intriguing flavours, precise techniques and exotic textures. The setting mirrors this sensibility: full-grain leather and velvet seating, 1960s-style lamps by Gae Aulenti for Martinelli Luce floating overhead, precious arabesque Carrara marble throughout, and Limoges porcelain with Christofle silverware to complete the one-Michelin-star experience.
